

Li Sheng Viola

Li Sheng, born in China in 1976. Currently, he serves as the Viola Professor and the head of the joint department of Strings, Woodwinds, Brass, and Percussion at the Shanghai Conservatory of Music. He previously held positions as a visiting viola professor at the Royal College of Music (2019-2021) and an artist in residence at the Curtis Institute of Music (2019).

In recent years, his students have won top prizes in the international competitions, including first places in Lionel Tertis International Viola Competition in 2013, New York Young Concert Artists (YCA) in 2014, Washington International String Music Competition in 2015, Muravev International String Music Competition in Russia in 2016.

Mr. Sheng has received several teaching awards including Shanghai May Day Labor Medal, Shanghai Gardener Award, He Luting Foundation Award (Special Prize), Shanghai Literature and Art Outstanding Teacher Award, First Prize of the Principal Award at the Affiliated Middle School of Shanghai Conservatory of Music, Tang Junyuan Outstanding Teacher Special Award in Shanghai.

As the first author, Mr. Sheng has published several academic papers in prominent academic journals in China, such as "National Music," "Symphony," "Yuefu New Sound," "People's Music," and "Music Research." He has also published an academic monograph of approximately 320,000 words titled "Viola Performance and Teaching."

born in China in 1976. Currently, he serves as the Viola Professor and the head of the joint department of Strings, Woodwinds, Brass, and Percussion at the Shanghai Conservatory of Music. He previously held positions as a visiting viola professor at the Royal College of Music (2019-2021) and an artist in residence at the Curtis Institute of Music (2019).

In recent years, his students have won top prizes in the international competitions, including first places in Lionel Tertis International Viola Competition in 2013, New York Young Concert Artists (YCA) in 2014, Washington International String Music Competition in 2015, Muravev International String Music Competition in Russia in 2016.

Mr. Sheng has received several teaching awards including Shanghai May Day Labor Medal, Shanghai Gardener Award, He Luting Foundation Award (Special Prize), Shanghai Literature and Art Outstanding Teacher Award, First Prize of the Principal Award at the Affiliated Middle School of Shanghai Conservatory of Music, Tang Junyuan Outstanding Teacher Special Award in Shanghai.

As the first author, Mr. Sheng has published several academic papers in prominent academic journals in China, such as "National Music," "Symphony," "Yuefu New Sound," "People's Music," and "Music Research." He has also published an academic monograph of approximately 320,000 words titled "Viola Performance and Teaching."